A pony's senses are much better than ours and they can hear things from much further away than we can. Ponies don't like it when it's windy because they can't hear very well. Sudden noises will cause them to get scared too! Here are some things that your pony might hear.

- BIRDSONG
- EATING
- ENGINE
- HOOVES
- LEAVES
- RADIO
- RAIN
- SNORTING
- SQUEAK
- WHINNY
- WIND

Play the Sounds Game

Try playing the sounds game with a friend or two.

First, place a chair in the middle of the room. One person will sit in the chair while the others position themselves around the chair in a circle. The person who sits in the chair closes their eyes. The others change places with each other and move around the room as quietly as they can. The person in the chair must listen really hard. When everyone is standing still again, the person in the chair points to where they think each person is standing. You could make up the rules for your own sounds game too.

What does this game tell you about your hearing?

Could you tell different people from the sounds they made?

How easy would it be for you to hear these things if you were outside and it was windy?

What does it tell you about your pony's awareness of things around him?
